“ Has it really been 7 years already? It's a period of time that continues to feel unreal. Never have I forgotten what I lost and felt that day. You were a part of my life while so many important things were happening, and you were always something I could count on being there at the end of the day to comfort and ease my mind.

You brought me joy in ways that are almost indescribable, and now that you're gone I don't think I'll ever truly feel the same way, no matter how much time passes. All it takes is the right memory to put me back into the moment, and the sensations come pouring in. Even if nobody else can understand, I am content being the one who continues to honor your memory and the time we spent together.

You'll always matter to me, Blanca, and my love for you will continue to my very last breath. Thank you for existing and being part of my life, you'll always be in my thoughts.

“ I wish you could still be here so much. It's been a long 6 years, and never once have I forgotten what I lost that day. You were a brightness in my life that helped shine me through dark moments, but now I feel so alone and in need of what I used to have. Only in memories am I able to capture a fraction of the joy I had when you were still around.

I feel so lonely now, and there will always be an emptiness in me that cuts deep as a result of your absence. I need these memories to keep me feeling happy in these lonelier times.

I love you Blanca, thank you so much for being a part of my life. I will always remember and miss you.

“ It's been 5 years. 5 years, and every day since then still is another reminder of the void that has been left since you left my life. The waves of grief come and go, but I can always feel so strongly thinking of my memories of you from years apart. Most of them make me feel joy, but others make me feel such regret and pain, especially nearing the end.

I will always carry that pain of indecisiveness, and guilt wondering if I could have done more, or if maybe my own actions contributed. It's enough to make me feel I deserve to be blamed or punished. But maybe those doubts and pain are what help serve as a powerful reminder, one that I will never forget.

For as long as I remain lucid, I never want to forget, I don't ever want to treat you like some disposable toy. To live a life without being able to remember you is not a life worth living. You existed as an irreplaceable individual, and as long as I live, I will keep your memory and importance alive through me.

I love you Blanca, now and forever. You'll always be in my memories.

“ Every year that passes doesn't ease the void that was left by your absence. It's been 4 years since that day.

In some ways, I can feel myself repressing those painful memories nearest to the end because of how much they hurt, but confronting them is always the greatest reminder of what once was. That emotion, the grieving, it never goes away, it just becomes part of you.

I can feel that sorrow whenever you come up in my thoughts, not just from memories, but sensations and smells that also remind me of you. But I'm glad I do feel that pain, because through it, there is also joy. Those emotions all show just how much impact you truly had on my life.

I love you Blanca. Words cannot express how much I wish you could still be at my side.

“ It's been three years. Three years already. I can vividly remember the pain I felt on that day and it hurts me as greatly as it did then. Not having you anymore is a sadness I will carry with me for the rest of my days, but as long as I can grasp the memories of you, then it is some reassurance that there were once happier times. I wish I had done more, even if it wouldn't have helped.

I love you Blanca, you're always there in my memories and mind.

“ Two years and you are still as important to me as you were before you left my life, and I haven't forgotten those times. As long as my memories remain intact, you'll always be remembered and in my thoughts.

“ It has been a year. But I haven't forgotten you. I'll never forget. Even as the days turn to weeks, the weeks turn to months, and the months turn to years. I will always be counting, and you'll always be on my mind, Blanca.

I still love you as dearly as I did when you were alive, and I'll never forget what you meant to me. I lost part of myself that day.

“ Blanca was a member of our family for 17 years. I grew up with her since she was a kitten of a few months old, while I was just a boy. She had a sister that tragically died after about a year from receiving both, and Blanca was all we had left. For those 17 years, she was the most amazing friend and companion I could ask for.

Now that she's gone, all I have left are the photos, videos, and any memories of the times we spent together. Pets like Blanca are not replaceable, or disposable companions, they are family members with their own unique personalities and traits, so there will never be another Blanca.

This void may never be filled, but I will always remember you, and think of you daily for as long as I hold a sound mind.
