

Brunny Marion

February 4, 2012

No obituary found for this tribute.

Tribute Wall

“ Brunny Marion

January 28, 2023 at 12:38 PM

“ Brunny Marion

January 28, 2023 at 10:16 AM

“ I think Bruny was in my dream last night :) I saw him wagging his little tail and I missed him sooo much. I love you baby...

Carolyn - April 30, 2012 at 09:02 AM

“ Love you Bruns.... Wish you were still here.

Carolyn - March 01, 2012 at 02:34 PM

“ I miss his really really soft fur :(

Carolyn - February 28, 2012 at 12:13 PM

CA

“Brunny was the best dog ever... He was always there for me. Needless to say that life wasn't easy growing up. Sure I had everything I needed..a good home a loving family and a dog:). But there weer series of events that just didnt need to happen and that put our family through a lot. While we were going through all these things, Brunny was always there... to listen to me cry or talk to myself.. but regardless I could count on him. Thats not the only reason he was cherished though. I got him when I was 10 so that meant that he was going to be with me thought my teenage years and into my adulthood, but more importantly he was with my mom all those years. Its easy for a teenager going to college to become an adult to oversee their pet, but when all this change was happening Brunny was right there for my mom. I think she misses him the most. Even tho he was a stuck up little king. :) I miss him soooo much. I hate the fact that I cant go home to 2 dogs one which is a fluffy little mop. Poor Bella is lonely too now. Which kinda works because she now keeps my mom company and they are getting along very well. I just miss my dog. My little Brun Brun. My old man... he was the best gift I ever got and he was my child hood dog watching over me every day and everytime he could. Theres sooo many memories that I cant write them all down. The day I saw his lifeless body they all ran through my head like rapid fire. All I could do was hold him and say goodbye... Later at the funeral home I saw a saying from one of the griving books. It was the first things I saw and it said "Our animals shepherd us through certain eras of our lives. When we are ready to turn the corner and make it on our own... They let us go. I started bawling as soon as I saw that because one week later... I was moving out on my own with my boyfriend to start my own life for the first time.

I have to be honest and mention that it is easy to not deal with Brunny being gone now that I have a new home with Juan. It makes things easier, but I imagine it makes things harder for my mom. So mommy, thanks for being strong enough for the both of us. I know it cant be easy especially with all this change. But I want you to know that Brunny will always be there for us and I will always be here for you. I love you mom.

Thank you Brunny, thank you for everything you brought into my life. The security, the love, the companionship, and the piece of mind. Everything that you did will impact me forever. Just being there for me and my mom <3 Your the best old man and I missss you soo much... but I can see that your job here was done and you did a dam good job<3 I Love you forever... Ill see you on that rainbow bridge.

Carolyn - February 22, 2012 at 02:30 PM