“ You changed so many lives in a profound way, when I thought we were giving you a home. We wanted to save you from being sold as food. It started off with a simple intention to do my best to care for you earnestly. You helped me say goodbye to my childhood home. You traveled with me in the car every time I moved. For a time when I was in my first apartment alone, struggling financially and unable to see or visit anyone for months, I knew everything would be fine because you were with me. After things got worse, I made decisions because you were in my life. I sought for help from my family because I knew I needed a stable roof over our heads to keep you safe. Looking back this stopped me from becoming homeless or worse. This helped me get back in touch with my family, be safe during the pandemic, the reason I met my partner, the reason I finally started my career, the reason I committed to be lifelong vegetarian, lastly the reason I have a future to look forward to. Things got better and I was finally able to spend money to get you everything I knew of to care for you. Your days when I was gone for work were no longer alone because you got to see my family in the living room every single day. I could only see you for a little while on my days off but I knew every time when leaving the house I would reach for the door you would see me and recognize me from the tank because you would start to swim around more when you noticed me from afar. I felt so special that a simple little creature like you would be able to learn to trust and remember me. I'm so sorry I couldn't figure out what was wrong in the last few days. I promise to keep making my life better for you because the impact you made will last forever. Thank you for saving me. Now that you're back in the atmosphere ..

“ This was Comet around 2019. We lived alone just him and I at the time. He was my best friend, the little buddy I would come home to even when there was no one else.
