“ Native Indian legend has it that soon after creation, the earth was torn in two. Man was on one side of the chasm, all the animals on the other. Only the dog tried to find a way across to join the man. He tried to jump the huge abyss but only his forepaws reached the far edge. Man reached down and pulled him to safety, saying, "You shall be my companion forever."

I always thought the important part of that story was the forever part. And that means that you will share time with Jere again. He is your companion FOREVER. Sending virtual hugs.

What a lovely thought, Dannie, TY so much for posting. I miss my little guy terribly but it's getting better with each passing day. Knowing I will see him again helps. (((DANNIE)))

“ Dearest Jere,

Just want you to know that even though I never met you, I know you're one special pooch. You were a great companion to my sweet friend, Fran, and for that reason alone I LOVE you.

Look for my Honey-girl, would you? She'll be there chasing doggy angels and creating all kinds of heavenly havoc. She needs a good influence like you.... oh wait... what I am I thinking? With Fran as your mommy all these years you're probably a little hellion yourself! But look for Honey, would ya? It'll do my heart good to know that that she'll have a friend to play with.

Much love,

Ruth

“ A truly beloved member of our family. He was always one of us. He was patient and kind and a great listener. Always so clean and coiffed, he was the Farrah Fawcett of dogs. I miss him already and can't imagine our first holiday without him. Sending him love, love, love - along with infinite treats! xoxo
