“ This has to be one of the hardest things I've ever had to write. Losing Laila has been one of the most, if not the most thus far, devastating, heartbreaking, core shattering losses I have ever experienced in life. And I know loss. I have lost close family members, extremely special people where their loss felt earth shattering but losing Laila - has been a whole other level of loss. I miss you everyday. I cry for you everyday. I feel guilty, I feel it all. I feel I should have done more. I would give absolutely anything to have more time with you. It feels too soon. Too many missed memories that we should be making. You were so full of life. You amazed me. To watch you age as if time did not affect you - I felt so blessed. You were so full of life, the energy, the fire, it made me so proud. My beautiful baby full of life. Full of sass, feistiness, rage, fierceness, bravado - because beware if anyone tried to invade our personal space lol, you showed them that you were the boss, the protector all 11 and some odd pounds of you LOL. I'll never forget how you entered my life, leaping into my arms and it was only fitting you leave the same way, in my arms. I will always cherish our relationship, you have taught me so much, gave me so much and continue to. You are and will always be EVERYTHING to me. Aside from your human brother, your love made me feel whole. And with you gone - a piece of me is gone with you. I love you Laila and always will. I carry with me all the love, all of our precious memories - every single moment we spent together the last almost 13 years. The most committed relationship I feel I will ever have in my life aside from your human brother who has been touched and forever impacted by you. And how I'm so thankful and grateful for that too. You being there for the most important times of my life. Getting me through so many tough times and being there for some of my happiest. I wish I could so many more things for you mama, make more memories give you more experiences - we had so many. Taking you almost everywhere, I will miss the most. I regret not being able to fly you to places, if we ever had a chance to do things again or make have more experiences, I would bring you EVERYWHERE. You might have barked and given me a hard time but I know once you are able to smell and experience a new environment, you would bask in it, enjoy it, I'd watch you live in the moment and feel like that is exactly how life should be. Sadly none of this will happen - I have to now live without you here, I thought we had more time - I thought I did all the things to keep you here for a good long time. I'm tragically reminded that life does not always work that way. Oh mama, my mamasita tan linda. I love you always and forever, my biggest wish is your brother's wish, to be with you once again. I love you baby girl.
