“ My Beloved Puppy Boy
2/25/12

A Better Friend you could not have. He would always meet me at the door after a long days work, usually with a sock or a shoe in his mouth strutting up and down the kitchen carpet like a runway model. Tail wagging with pleasure of just being together again. His outlook on life was something so beautiful so simple and so sincere that any person look at him and wish they were him. He lived for the moment, he lived to be near the people he loved and he lived with a grace and ease of someone who knew people loved him. What a gentle soul he was. Truly he was what comforted and calmed all of the different personalities in the house. He related to all of us in a different way. He was never aggressive, never loud, never someone you didn't want to be with. In times of happiness and sadness he was someone you wanted to share the experience with.

I wish I had the powers to make him better. To heal him so he could continue along in life with us, but I can't help him now. He is dying and he will soon be in your hands God. You will never have a better more loving dog in Heaven. He will join my beloved father who will love max as we did they are the same kind and gentle temperament. Puppy boy will sit by your feet and keep you company each and every day. Maybe if I live this life as well and as good as he did I will come to see you my father and Max again.

Please take care of my Puppy Boy. He likes toast and cheese and salami the best. Please oh please help my children Daniel, James and Caitlin with the loss of their best friend. They will be hurting for a while I am sure. Let them know that Life and Death are intertwined and without one you can't have the other. I will try my best to be strong for them. After we mourn for him I will make it my goal to celebrate Max's life. Please help me choose the right words to guide them thru this most difficult time. We have each other and there are 5 of us so we will get thru this as long as we can depend on each other. We do not want our Max to suffer the inevitable pain associated with the quick and deadly kidney and renal failure that has been taking place for the last week. Please show mercy on us for giving him back to you sooner than nature would allow. We don't want our boy to suffer. Nature can be cruel and heartless sometimes and we want him to pass onto you with the dignity and poise he has shown during his lifetime.

Please forgive us for not seeing that he was so sick earlier. He is so stoic and mild tempered that we could not tell. We love him very, very much and give him back to you with the trust that you will love him care for him until we all see him again at your feet.

Dennis
