“ My Powder was named because when she was adopted and joined our Family, I had another all white fur baby named Baby... hence, I then had Baby Powder ... which seemed appropriate for two all white babies.

She was always a shy girl (I suspect some awful human may have hurt or traumatized her in some way before she became mine) but she remained sweet and absolutely no trouble to have in our Family. I always talked sweetly to her so she was assured she was safe and very much loved. I always worried that if the day came that she needed medicine or some kind of medical treatment from me that she wouldn't have any of it and would resist. Lo and behold, when she was recently diagnosed with a probable cancer, she totally cooperated and allowed me to give her medicine which would alleviate her discomfort through her last days.

Somehow she just knew what I was doing was out of my love for her. My heart both aches because she had to leave and is warmed by me having been able to hold her and comfort her throughout the lady night of her life and until she crossed the bridge to join her brothers Baby , Petey, and sisters Meow and Dolly.. all of whom had gone before her.

Precious Powder, there will never be a day that I won't miss you and I will always hold you in my heart . ❤️❤️
